Is Asia up to the challenge?
Bangkok, Thailand - March 1st-2nd 2012

i-genius Asia Summit on Social Entrepreneurship
About us
Asia Summit Background:

i-genius Asia Summit on social entrepreneurship examined the potential for social innovation in the fastest growing region in the world and explored how it can be raised to an even higher level over the coming decade. Professor Kriengsak Chareonwongsak opened the Summit with a lecture on 'What the future holds for Asia' and participants then addressed seven challenges over the two days.

Challenge 1: Swot Asia - identifying regional strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, threats

Challenge 2: Customers First! Expanding markets for sustainable growth

Challenge 3: Skills and Knowhow - making training and development relevant

Challenge 4: Finance and Investment - getting the cash to flow

Challenge 5: Designing a Legal and Regulatory Framework for Governments

Challenge 6: Developing Networks, Partnerships and Engaging Stakeholders

Challenge 7: Good Communications - awareness raising and generating media profile

i-genius is a world community of social entrepreneurs (people passionate about social and environmental change) with members in over 200 countries.

Established in 2007, it provides a popular community website, media profile, i-genius Academy training and events (workshops, university Masters Level courses, conferences, seminars, study tours) and i-genius Promotions - a social business marketing and strategic consultancy agency with direct market access.
Innovation in the city of Angels

Crossing borders and connecting Asia...
Yes, it is! This was the theme and question posed by the i-genius Asia Summit on Social Entrepreneurship in the City of Angels (Bangkok). With over 70 participants from across Asia, the two-day interactive summit connected individuals, businesses, academics, media, organisations, and government personnel together for what proved to be an intimate and inspiring gathering.

On the first day of the Asia Summit i-genius released the results of its pan-Asia survey, which discovered that universities need to improve (not just in Asia, but globally) in order to adapt to the changing social and business markets. There were also inspiring case studies on relevant topics such as eco-entrepreneurship. The format was round-table conversation style with minimal formal presentations thereby giving participants a real opportunity to dig deep and contribute to the topics.

Over the two days each participant tackled the 7 challenges with innovative thought and passion, whilst working together with their fellow Asian professionals. The ideas and partnerships created crossed borders and even developed into a new East Asian Social Enterprise Network, of which i-genius is proud to be the catalyst.

Our gratitude to the British Council for their sponsorship. We are also most grateful to the following partners Qi, Driving Innovation Culture, Synergy Social Ventures, Global Social Venture Competition, ChangeFusion, SEDPI, FYSE, Liverpool Hope University, and the Center for Sustainable Enterprise.
A new generation of social entrepreneurs has emerged...
Universities came under the spotlight in i-genius’ exclusive survey of social entrepreneurs across Asia with only 19% of respondents saying university courses on social enterprise were of high quality (42% said they were poor with the remainder unsure).

The results of the survey formed the backdrop to the i-genius Asia Summit in Bangkok, 1st - 2nd March, which sees social entrepreneurs meeting government officials, business leaders, NGOs and academics. The two-day gathering aims to explore how to improve the practical and policy framework for social entrepreneurship throughout the region.

Key findings of the survey:

• 70% said universities were slow to provide courses on social entrepreneurship or social businesses

• Less than one-in-ten (9%) felt universities were offering sufficient number of courses

• Courses which do exist tend to be too academic

• Two thirds of social businesses expect to increase the number of employees in the next 12 months

• Sourcing finance and marketing skills featured highest in skills social entrepreneurs most needed

• 59% expect to seek investment finance over the next two years

• Whilst more felt governments were supportive than those who did not, 52% felt their governments did not grasp the significant benefits social entrepreneurship can bring to sustainable growth, job creation and community cohesion

i-genius founder, Tommy Hutchinson said ‘A new generation of social entrepreneurs has emerged and universities have been slow to respond to their needs. Many feel university courses do not provide them with the practical skills they need to grow their business.’
